

Whenever Henry Wilt took the dog for a walk, or to be more accurate, when the dog took him, or, to be exact, when Mrs Wilt told them both to go and take themselves out of the house so that she could do her yoga exercises, he always took the same route. In fact, the dog followed the route and Wilt followed the dog. However, the first Monday of July 1995 something unusual happened. While they were walking through the forest, Tom, the dog, turned left in a path they hadn't visited before. Mr Wilt didn't understand why, but he followed its lead. They arrived to a beautiful large field and Tom started smelling everywhere. After an hour, night started to fall and Harry, who was distracted by the nature, decided to return to his house. In that moment, he realised that his dog had disappeared some minutes ago and that he hadn't noticed it. He felt anxious and run all the way round the field. He didn't find Tom, but he saw something he would never forget. He found a man lying on the floor, whose stomach was bleeding. He was panting and barely could talk. Even though, Henry called an ambulance and went with him to the hospital.

Two days later, Mr and Mrs Wilt were sitting on their sofa, both of them desperate. They still hadn't found Tom and the man Henry found wasn't able to explain what had happened to him that evening.

Although they were scared, they decided to go back to the place where Henry had seen Tom for the last time. They searched everywhere and finally discovered some dog footprints. Henry and his wife followed them; they were feeling enthusiastic, as they thought those were Tom's footprints. Unfortunately, they were wrong. They arrived to a little cave where there were two little wolves. They imagined the worst. The police went there and tried to find out what had happened but the investigation wasn't successful. A week later, when Henry arrived home from the office, he heard a noise in the garden. He went to see what was happening and saw the last thing he would have imagined. He found Tom. It was in very poor conditions but, luckily, they could save it. Later, they discovered that the man in the hospital had explained that wolves had harmed him and that he hadn't died in the fight thanks to the help of a dog. That dog was Tom.